exhibiting simultaneously in three immense circus rings, embracing nearly two hundred articles of all nations. Also, a Splendid Museum and a Grand Menagerie.

Among the leading, sensational features are the great and only LILLI, who is hurried more than one hundred feet through the air from a powerful catapult, performing two complete evolutions before alighting in the net. Also, the Wonderful Dive of Geraldine, who plunges headfirst seven feet downward from the dome of the Hippodrome. Also, the exciting Hippodrome Races, (Chariot Races, Jockey Races, Lady Hurdle Races, Flat and St. Leger Races, and the like), giving a series of the most novel and intensely interesting performances ever witnessed in Washington.

Remember, the show remains only two days, FRIDAY and SATURDAY, September 30 and October 1, on lot corner Ninth and S streets. Those wishing to avoid the crowds at the ticket office can procure tickets on the day of exhibition at Ellis and Metzger's.

FIRST LIEUT. C. P. PORTER, U. S. M. C., has been detached from duty at the Marine Barracks, Washington, D. C., and ordered to take command of the Marine Guard of the Constitution, now at Newport, R. I.

SECRETARY HUNT left by the Baltimore & Potomac to-day morning for his long deferred tour of inspection of Northern and Eastern navy-yards. He is expected to return on October 8, until which time Rear-Admiral Nichols will act as Secretary.

BY DIRECTION of the Secretary of War leave of absence for six months, from Sept. 1, is granted Second Lieutenant F. P. Blair, 3d Artillery. The resignation of First Lieutenant F. D. Grant, 4th Cavalry, has been accepted by the President, to take effect October 1.

COMMANDANT PHELPS, at Mare Island, Cal., reports to the Navy Department that four vessels of the Russian Pacific fleet, under Rear-Admiral Alasmbegoff, and the Italian screwship Garibaldi, have arrived at San Francisco, and the usual national courtesies were exchanged.

SEVERAL MEMBERS of the Cabinet, including James, Windom and Lincoln, called on President Arthur this morning, and one of them stated afterward that it was definitely understood that there was to be no Cabinet changes at least until the Senate convenes in extra session.

A GOLD memorial medal of the late President will soon be issued from the Philadelphia United States mint. There will be two kinds, a one-dollar medal, which will be half an inch in diameter, and a ten-dollar medal, an inch in diameter. On one side will be a medallion of Garfield, on the other Lincoln.

TO GUARD GARFIELD'S REMAINS--The Secretary of War to-day issued an order for a company of the Tenth Infantry at Fort Wayne, Detroit, Mich., to proceed at once to Cleveland, Ohio, to remain in constant guard over the tomb of the late President. The troops will be encamped in Lake View Cemetery.

THE FOLLOWING "Presidential" postmasters have been appointed: George M. Francis, Napa City, Napa County, California; J. J. H. Howard, suspended; J. A. Harding, Ia. Des Moines; vice Solomon Star, suspended; E. T. Langley, Frazer, Tama County, vice Miss Z. A. Taylor, resigned; Wm. W. Strait, South Pueblo, Colorado, vice E. S. Nettleton, resigned.

NOTHING has been heard from Private Secretary Brown, Gen. Swain and Col. Rockwell, and it is not known when they will return. It is known, however, that Mr. Brown will act as private secretary to the President for a very short time; that Gen. Swain will not resign his position as judge-advocate-general of the army, and that Col. Rockwell will give up his position as Commissioner of Public Buildings and Grounds.

THE Whitaker court-martial case now awaits action of Judge-Advocate-General Swain. The testimony has been accepted reviewed by Judge-Advocate Winthrop, Curtis, and Goodfellow, and their reports have been submitted. Gen. Swain has not yet had an opportunity to consider the case, and the charges are so numerous that he will hardly be ready for the President before Christmas. Gen. Swain makes his report to the Secretary of War.

OUR ARCTIC LETTER.

PROGRESS OF THE GREELEY EXPEDITION.

Incidents of the Trip Through the Ice--Peculiarities of Esquimaux Dogs--Exploration of Old Cairns--The Entrance to Lady Franklin Bay.

Special Correspondence of THE EVENING CRITIC.

DISCOVERY HARBOR, LADY FRANKLIN BAY--Latitude 81°44' N., Longitude 61°45' W.--Aug. 18.--We left St. John's July 7. We had an uneventful passage to Disco, where we arrived on the 10th.

We experienced considerable fog on the way, and passed through two small packs of ice in latitude 61° and 62° N. We first sighted the "Land of Desolation" on the 12th. The inspector of North Greenland received us with great marks of hospitality and distinction, saluting us with three guns of the formidable battery placed in front of his residence, to which we replied with our heavy piece, which, with the application of much labor, we managed to discharge every half hour until the inspector saluted us sufficiently recognized.

The Disco people have been so often described that I will spare you, although the temptation to descend on the oleomargarine Esquimaux maidens in their pantaloons is very strong.

Every voyager to these regions also sends back accounts of the remarkable performances of the Greenlanders in their graceful and fairy-like kayaks, but I refer your multitudinous readers to the plates in their rudimentary geographies where the Esquimaux is represented "bobbing up serenely" in his frail bark which is well balanced across the back of an infuriated walrus, in which he has stuck his iron harpoon. We remained at Godhavn four days. Took on part of our live stock of dogs with food for the same, consisting of walrus meat and dried fish. Left Godhavn on the 21st and Bittenbek, where we were joined by Dr. Pary and H. Clay, on 23d of July.

We passed through the strait separating Disco Island from the mainland and reached Upernavik the 24th. We had magnificent scenery all the way--barren and desolate, but impressive. The glacier near Jacobsen supplies a sufficient number of icebergs to diversify and make interesting the scene. While the ship was at Upernavik the steam-launch Lady Greeley made a trip to Proven, where the services of two Esquimaux were procured to accompany the expedition as dog drivers and hunters. We were surprised to see that they actually shed tears on leaving their Greenland homes. We expected they would have felt like the inhabitant of St. John, N. B., who, being refused admittance into Hades on account of the crowded condition of the latter place, exclaimed disparagingly, "Must I go back to St. John?" We could not imagine any one grieving over a separation from Greenland.

We killed a large number of birds while at Upernavik. Over 400 were brought on board in one day. They were evaporated and hung up in the rigging of dry, and still form an important part of our game-dried. We took on one complement of dogs at Upernavik--thirty-four in all. Such a howling wilderness of dogs never was seen as the pen on deck then contained. They were taken on in different batches at Disco, Upernavik and other points; and, as each successive body of recruits were added, the main party attempted to eat them up. After party differences were settled, individual grievances were discussed. The remnant that was left of one aggressive fellow was finally recognized as the boss. After establishing his supremacy better order prevailed, owing to his efforts to preserve peace. He proposed doing all the fighting himself. It was a luxury that but one other dog and himself could enjoy at the same time. He was most selfish dog I ever saw. I actually believe that he would have fought with himself if he could have made such an interline arrangement. One of his accomplishments was a howl solo with a chorus. Any dog not joining in the diabolical chorus was punished as soon as the leader could attend to him.

At Disco our harder received the addition of five hundred pounds of white whale skin. It resembles kelp, but is said to taste like turkey.

We left Upernavik for Lady Franklin Bay July 29. Here another temptation assails me. An insane desire to attempt to describe the "wild, weird scenery, silence, stately icebergs and the midnight sun" hanging over the Arctic horizon, refusing to set or sit or stand still or do anything but shine. But I conquer myself and leave it to your imagination.

The first day out we steamed through a loose pack of ice and saw and conquered the first Polar bear. It did not appear to be of the soda-water fountain species; at least, it did not appear quite so formidable as those monsters that glare down upon the innocent timber of "fizz." His tough carcass furnished us with beefsteak next morning. Next day we killed our first seal. Then the following day we killed a little bird, and the next day we did not kill anything. This dwindling down from Polar bears to nothing disappointed us greatly. Having commenced on Polar bear we naturally expected to cope with seal-sons next.

August 1 we reached Carey Islands, and examined the cairn erected by Capt. Allen Goring of the Pandora, now Jeanette. We also found the depot of provisions left by Capt. Nares of the English expedition of 1875. Found everything in good condition. The rum was tested, and pronounced excellent. The preserved meat appeared as good as when deposited, six years ago. Then we sighted Cape Alexander on the 2d. We were having a most successful passage and no obstruction by the ice-pack. We landed on Lyttelton Island the same day. We found the cairn containing the letters left by Capt. Allen for the Nares party. They were never received by the Englishmen, so Lieut. Greeley brought them on board. He will send them back in the Proteus to England via St. John's. We also visited the winter quarters of the Polar party, their second winter. We found the transit left there and other relics.

On the way back from Kane's Life-boat Cove in a boat we shot a walrus that looked as if it intended boring holes in the boat with its tusks, but it didn't. Then we kept on through Smith's Sound, called at Cape Hawks, the "Gibraltar of the Arctic," and appropriated the rations left there by the expedition under Sir George Nares. This was on the 3d. We passed Cape Frazer at 2:50 p. m. of the 4th of August, a most remarkable and unprecedented trip, when we take into consideration the experience of all those who have previously navigated it. The Nares party occupied twenty-one days in getting from Lyttelton Island to Cape Frazer. He made the same distance over the same ground in sixteen hours. Our good fortune was almost beyond belief. Instead of a continual battle with the ice, which has fallen to the lot of all other ships attempting the passage, we had a comparatively open channel. No ice of sufficient importance to impede the ship's progress. As Capt. Ritter Bay we made a cache of provisions for use in the event of a retreat by boat being necessary. We were just congratulating ourselves on the evident successful ending of our voyage, our point of destination in sight, when, at 9:40 p. m., on the 4th of August, we saw a solid pack of ice twenty feet thick, extending from shore to shore. We were then off Cape Baird, in latitude 81° 26' N., at the southeast entrance to Lady Franklin Bay, within ten miles of our proposed anchorage. For seven days we were compelled to lay fastened to the ice. The pack presented a solid front; nothing but ice ahead of us up Robeson Channel. The celebrated Peterman Fiord Polar Promontory and Hall's Thank God Harbor on the one side, and Capes Lieter and Baird on the other. Snow fell part of two days while we were at the ice. White whales were seen. Esquimaux Jens fastened to one with his harpoon, but the fish broke away from him.

On the 11th of August the ice broke away as far north as Polar Promontory, and moving down, permitted us to pass. Discovery Harbor was filled with ice. The Proteus forced her way to anchorage by charging the ice at full speed, sometimes making but a few feet at each successive butt. The ice had to be blasted with powder to extricate her once or twice. On the day of the arrival fourteen muskoxen were killed, an ample supply of fresh meat for months.

The work of unloading and putting up the house went rapidly on. To-night everything is ashore. The ship will start to return to-morrow morning. Seven of our thirty-four dogs have died of a distemper, but one of the survivors has presented us with eight little ones, making up the deficiency.

A LAWYER'S OPINION
About Guitau's Trial and the Pending Controversy Among the Doctors.

A representative of THE CRITIC, in conversation with a prominent and influential member of the Washington bar this morning, has been asked his opinion of the forthcoming trial of Guitau. Said that: "There is no question in my mind but that Guitau will have a fair and impartial trial."

"But," put in THE CRITIC, "what about obtaining a jury?"

"That will be an easy matter. The attorney for Guitau must certainly concede the shooting. That over, the only question then at issue will be as to whether the gentlemen implicated in it on the jury have formed or expressed an opinion touching the sanity of the prisoner. I doubt if one man in any hundred has ever expressed himself with reference to the sanity of the assassin."

"Will the fight," asked the reporter, "which the late attending physicians and outsiders are now having, have any bearing on the case?"

"I will say this," said the lawyer, "that the discussion now going on between Drs. Bliss, Hamilton and the other attending physicians, and the outside, or, as I call them, recalcitrant physicians, is out of place at this time. One of the principal actors in the great national tragedy has disappeared, and the doctors should certainly have postponed the discussion until the disappearance of the other."

"What effect," asked THE CRITIC, "will the quarrel of the doctors have on the trial of Guitau?"

"Well, inasmuch as the outside physicians insist that the wound of the late President was not mortal in the first place, but that it was rendered so by malpractice, it would appear that they are setting up a feeble defense for the doctor who is kicking doctors ought, I think, to let this whole matter drop until the prisoner is tried and convicted or acquitted."

A Boom in the Photographic Business.
The shooting and death of the President has been a profitable matter for the photographers. Pictures of every incident connected with the assassination may now be sold at all news stands. The latest additions to the very interesting and what may some time become famous collection of photographs is a scene of the room in which the President lay at the White House; a photograph of the sick-room in Franklin D. Roosevelt's private apartments at Elberon and in the White House; and a photograph of the late President's cottage at Mentor. All of these pictures find a ready sale, but, as a picture seller said to a reporter of THE CRITIC to-day, "There never was such a run on photographs as the present demand for pictures of President Arthur." Even as he spoke a group of three ladies were examining photographs of the new President exhibited on his stand. There were full face, three-quarter and full profile pictures of the President, and
